For Austin Musicians
2016 Annual Report

THE MORE THINGS CHANGE

THE MORE THE
NEED FOR HAAM
STAYS THE SAME

DEAR FRIENDS OF HAAM:

The year 2016 ushered in a lot of change and uncertainty about the future of healthcare and the Affordable Care Act. But because of you, HAAM continues to be a beacon of stability and support for thousands of Austin musicians.

The truth is HAAM has gotten really good at riding the changing tides of the healthcare landscape. For the past few years, we have seamlessly adapted to shifting policies and programs. And today, because of your loyal and generous support, HAAM is serving more musicians than ever before.

With all of the changes in healthcare, it's harder than ever to navigate the healthcare system. In response, in 2016, HAAM introduced new navigation and case management services to help our musician members get the healthcare they need.

At HAAM, we have always been proud of our innovative and collaborative service model. We continue to partner with Foundation Communities, Central Health and Seton Healthcare Family. The St. David's Foundation and Capital Area Dental Foundation also partner with HAAM to ensure we provide dental care to our musician members. Our relationships with the SIMS Foundation for mental health services, Estes Audiology for hearing services and Prevent Blindness Texas for vision care are just more examples of how we work together for the good of musicians.

Our amazing HAAM staff is always looking to do more to keep music in Austin alive and well. With that in mind, HAAM added a Hepatitis C program and also launched a restorative dental care program which has helped dozens of musicians with more complex dental needs.

Everything around us may be changing, including Austin itself, but HAAM's mission and passion is eternal. Our hardworking HAAM Board of Directors, of which I was privileged to chair in 2016, is more committed than ever to providing its members access to quality and affordable healthcare.

With your support, HAAM intends to remain a steady, constant source of comfort and stability for the hundreds of musicians who count on us every day.

Sincerely,

Chris Adams

2016 Chair, HAAM Board of Directors

I credit HAAM for saving his life. Without it, I'm sure he wouldn't be here today.”

ARLEY BLANKENSHIP

Smiles in the Hill Country

Arley and Rickey Blankenship live among the rolling hills of Wimberley in the Texas Hill Country. Husband and wife are both musicians with an eclectic bent, but a deep love for the blues and jazz. The couple signed up for HAAM in 2013.

Although Arley is enrolled in Medicare, the program doesn't cover everything, so he utilizes HAAM for dental care, services which his wife Rickey credits with saving his life. That's because prior to receiving dental work through HAAM, Arley had a dangerously elevated platelet count, putting him at high risk for heart attack and stroke. Arley's doctors told him his condition was usually caused by one of two things: genetics or a reaction to something else going on in the body. That something else may very well have been periodontal (gum) disease.

After experiencing debilitating weakness and fatigue, Arley reached out to HAAM. With help from its affiliate service provider, the Capital Area Dental Foundation, Arley was connected to Dr. Karen Knight, who over the course of several months, extracted eight of Arley's teeth. "As soon as I had those teeth pulled, I immediately felt better," said Arley.

Arley is also a beneficiary of HAAM's new Advanced Restorative Care Program, which is helping him pay for a full set of dentures. "When I found out that I was eligible for the new program, I was just floored," he said.

Dr. Michael Shedlosky, an oral surgeon, pulled four more of Arley's teeth to help prepare for the dentures. Arley and Rickey are deeply grateful HAAM is a part of their lives. "The world we live in is difficult at best," said Rickey. "But it is a wonderful thing to know that there are people out there who care and support organizations like HAAM. You are saving lives and saving live music, all over, not just in Austin."

HAAM BENEFIT DAY 2016

HAAM Benefit Day is one of the most iconic days in Austin. In its 11th year, HAAM Benefit Day raised over $500,000 for affordable healthcare for Austin musicians. The much-anticipated event brought the entire Austin community together for a day full of unbeatable live music at 200 venues throughout the city.

From day one, Whole Foods Market has been by HAAM's side as Presenting Sponsor. We couldn't ask for a better partner. Thank you to the entire community who once again came out to show their love and support for Austin's legendary musicians. And of course, our heartfelt thanks to the more than 200 businesses that pledged a percentage of their entire day's sales to HAAM.

Our HAAM Benefit Day Committee rose to the occasion and then some. A special thank you to committee chair, Jay Painter, our wonderful HAAMbassadors and to the HAAM staff for working around the clock to create the magic that is HAAM Benefit Day.

RAY BENSON'S ANNUAL BIRTHDAY BASH

After a short hiatus, HAAM was excited to help bring back Ray Benson's Annual Birthday Bash in 2016! This long-standing Austin tradition (which benefits HAAM), unofficially kicks off the annual SXSW Music Festival and is regarded by the Austin music scene as THE party of the year.

Guests enjoyed exclusive access to performances by the legendary Ray Benson and Asleep at the Wheel plus his slew of friends, which was topped off by none other than the King of Country – George Strait.

In 2016, Ray Benson's 65th Birthday Bash raised more than $87,000 for HAAM through sponsorships, a silent auction and onsite donations. Special thanks to Presenting Sponsor Delaware North as well as sponsors Chevron, David & Deborah Bourke, Chris Mattsson, John McHale, Morris Glass and the St. David's Foundation.

Be sure to save the date for next year's party, March 13, 2018! For information on sponsorships and tables, email Rikki Hardy at rikki@myhaam.org.

HAAM really proves that Austin values its musicians and is on a completely different level of caring than any other city.”

- DEVAN MULVANEY

DEVAN MULVANEY

Healing Through Music

Two years ago, Devan Mulvaney had just finished recording his first album in Brooklyn when he lost his parents and sister to a tragic car accident. For the better part of a year, Devan was left to sort out his parent's estate and cope with the devastating loss of his entire family, all of whom were successful musicians.

About a year later, Devan and his girlfriend, Lucy, moved to Austin looking for a fresh start in a supportive music community. "After the accident, I decided that I really needed to put all of my focus on my music," said Devan, who held down a full-time job while recording his first album. "Time is too short."

Devan had health insurance through his employer in New York, but had no coverage when he moved to Austin. "We were stressed about what we were going to do about health insurance," he said. But then his best friends, Jonny and Carley Wolf of The Ghost Wolves, told him about HAAM. "I was blown away by how helpful and open HAAM was with me. We were up and rolling within a few months," he said.

HAAM has enabled Devan to continue weekly therapy sessions to help him cope with his tragic loss. "After the accident, I knew I was completely out of my depth about how to process what happened," said Devan, who began therapy soon after the accident. "Every single day, week and month present me with new challenges, but the weekly sessions with my therapist really help balance me out."

Devan's debut album, "Whippersnapper," dropped on October 13, 2017, with three of the tracks featured on the NPR program "Echoes." "When you deal with a loss this big, a lot of times you ask yourself, 'what's the point of going on?' For me, I kept reminding myself, 'I need to finish this record.' It kept me grounded and helped me focus on something joyful, while everything else was spinning around me. To complete this project and play music again reminds me that life is still possible."

Devan plans to tour next year and is comforted to know that he has HAAM as his guardian angel. "The biggest thing HAAM gives me is peace of mind. When everything happened to me, there were so many unknown variables, so many things to worry about," he said. "Knowing that I have health coverage alleviates some of my stress, especially when I am on the road."

DJ SHANI

Coming Back Strong

One night, six months after being diagnosed with multiple sclerosis (MS), DJ Shani was working a fundraiser, using a cane to stabilize herself. She met a HAAM staff member and within four days was signed up for HAAM.

“That was the beginning of my relationship with HAAM,” said DJ Shani.

Before moving to Austin in 2009, DJ Shani was a prominent player in Chicago’s House Music scene. Twice a week, she had a residency at a legendary dance club and on Saturday nights she deejayed an iconic radio show.

When DJ Shani was first diagnosed with MS, she applied for other health coverage programs and disability, but was denied. “I had no family in Austin and fell into a crazy depression. When your body doesn’t work, what are you supposed to do?” she said.

Through HAAM, DJ Shani has been able to find security and support. She has a primary care physician at Seton’s McCarthy Community Health Center who monitors her MS. Regular acupuncture helps manage her chronic pain. When DJ Shani was diagnosed with thyroid cancer, HAAM helped cover surgery to remove a goiter that was making it hard for her to breathe and swallow. To help her cope with the stress of living with a chronic disease, HAAM connected DJ Shani to the SIMS Foundation for counseling services.

DJ Shani is excited to see Austin changing and becoming more open to new kinds of music. But she is also grateful that HAAM is a constant fixture in the city’s ever-changing music scene. “I feel like every single city with a significant creative community needs something like HAAM so that musicians can stay healthy and functional,” she said. “If you love Austin and love live music, you should support HAAM.”

Getting diagnosed with multiple sclerosis really threw me for a loop. It’s like having the ultimate rug pulled from underneath you. Now that I have HAAM, I don’t feel so alone. I can see a doctor. I feel like I have support.”

Even though Austin has changed, HAAM has been a constant source of comfort and support for me, something that truly sets Austin apart from other cities.”

– JDUB

JDUB

Embracing Change

JDub, the frontman for digital dream pop band, Astrotheque, is an accomplished vocalist, seasoned multi-instrumentalist, producer and longtime educator. He was also one of the first musicians to sign up for HAAM.

“When HAAM first came along, it really did seem too good to be true,” said JDub.

Like many working musicians, JDub works hard to maintain multiple streams of income. After studying at Baylor University, he enrolled in a career school for audio production. Years later, he landed a job teaching production and songwriting. He has also served as director of worship in several Austin churches and has toured in New York City twice with his original music. His passion project, Astrotheque, is a joint venture with Venezuelan producer Claudio Ramirez.

JDub works hard to stay healthy and is a strong believer in preventive care. He sees the dentist twice a year for checkups and is diligent about using his custom earplugs provided by HAAM’s affiliate service provider, Estes Audiology. When he threw his back out, HAAM covered 80 percent of the cost of his emergency room visit. These days, JDub manages his back pain with chiropractic care, which is also made affordable by HAAM. He has used the SIMS Foundation for counseling and is grateful to have had access over the years to affordable mental health services.

Like many of his fellow HAAM members, JDub is full of praise for the medical providers who open their doors to HAAM members. He not only appreciates the excellent care he receives, but how it is delivered.

JDub has seen a lot of changes in Austin, but is optimistic about the music scene and the city’s future. “I can’t even imagine what Austin would be like without HAAM,” said JDub. “But I do know that Austin wouldn’t be able to call itself the live music capital of the world without it.”
