HEALTH ALLIANCE FOR
AUSTIN MUSICIANS

Keeping Music in Austin Alive & Well

Did you know that live music is not only part of Austin’s cultural identity, but also an essential economic engine for our city, bringing in billions of dollars through live performances each year? In maintaining this vital identity, it is important for us, as a community, to ensure our musicians are alive and well, and able to keep playing the music we all love.

TAKING CARE OF AUSTIN MUSICIANS

The Health Alliance for Austin Musicians (HAAM) provides access to affordable healthcare for Austin’s low-income, underinsured working musicians with a focus on prevention and wellness. HAAM delivers a lifeline to Austin musicians, and since 2005, has helped more than 4,900 musicians access over $46 million in healthcare services, ranging from primary and specialty care, dental, vision, hearing, mental health and other services.

OVER 200 SHOWS IN ONE DAY

HAAM Day is the largest fundraiser of the year for the Health Alliance for Austin Musicians. In one day, HAAM, along with presenting sponsor Whole Foods Market, will host an all-inclusive, citywide benefit raising support for local musicians. More than 200 acts will perform in Austin clubs, restaurants, retail stores, bank lobbies and more to help raise funds.

Supporting organizations like HAAM helps to foster and nurture Austin’s unique, creative appeal, and take care of the musicians that make this city “The Live Music Capital of the World.” We hope that you will join us in supporting one of Austin’s most valuable assets—our musicians. Get out and shop, eat, drink and enjoy live music on September 11, 2018!

Huge Thanks to the St. David’s Foundation and the Capital Area Dental Foundation for their dedication in providing quality dental treatments and oral health services to HAAM members.

Big Thanks to Estes Audiology for providing comprehensive auditory services, including hear screenings and custom fit ear plugs, to HAAM members.

SEPTEMBER 11, 2018
HAAM is a uniquely Austin nonprofit, supporting the cultural arts as well as working as a safety net provider. Through unique collaborations, HAAM has provided over $46 million in healthcare services. The millions of dollars in services provided each year are a direct result of HAAM’s partnerships with its affiliate service providers. Without their continued commitment, HAAM would be unable to survive as an organization.
In an instant, local musician Sydney Wright’s life and career came into jeopardy when a hit-and-run left her with multiple injuries. She was abandoned in the middle of the road, going in-and-out of consciousness until taken to the hospital.

Wright sustained several broken bones in her right leg, two broken bones in her wrist and fractures in her spine and head. She spent more than three weeks in the hospital, undergoing four surgeries. She will likely have more surgeries to come.

West Texas born Wright plays the piano, guitar, sings and has been making music for most of her life—it is all she knows. At age 15, Wright picked up playing the guitar and hasn’t stopped since. She has worked diligently to get where she is today, now playing at larger venues and touring.

“Sydney is an extraordinary talent and is going to go very far in her career—she is truly the whole package, one of the most promising talents in Austin right now,” Heather Wagner Reed, Wright’s publicist, said. “This accident has been difficult, but is only a minor setback in her journey. Her attitude is inspiring through all this. She has handled it with absolute grace. It’s pretty inspiring.”

Immediately following Wright’s accident, the Health Alliance for Austin Musicians (HAAM) reached out to her directly, making sure she had access to everything she needed.

“Serving our members is what HAAM does. We are there to help musicians navigate the healthcare system through some of the most difficult and daunting times of their lives,” Reenie Collins, executive director of HAAM, said. “Not only is it overwhelming and confusing, but there is also the added stress of being a musician, having little income, and wondering how to possibly afford the care they need. We are there for Austin musicians on a daily basis and during healthcare crises. Stories like Sydney’s happen to many of our members, and we are always there to assist.”

Wright understands the true value of programs such as HAAM. Without the organization, she would never have had access to affordable healthcare, and without that access, may never have been able to play again following her accident.

“In 2015, I aged out of my dad’s plan. He had a comprehensive healthcare plan through his government job, so I have always known the importance of having insurance,” Wright said. “HAAM has been a safety net throughout this entire process, contacting me multiple times. I feel confident, secure and taken care of. It’s a freedom that HAAM offers.”

For Wright, having HAAM made this terrible tragedy a little easier to bear. The stress of the accident, piled on with knowing she wouldn’t be able to work and earn money, was less of a burden because she had received healthcare through HAAM. Without HAAM, she would not have been able to afford the care she needed, possibly bankrupting her.

“I was told of HAAM when I first came to Austin—it is well-known throughout the Austin music industry,” Wright said. “Prior to my accident, had I not received services through HAAM, I would not have even been able to see the dentist or get my teeth cleaned. HAAM is the angel in the room for our community. We, as musicians, are fortunate to have access to such a caring organization.”

While Wright still has not fully recovered, she is on her way and plans to perform on HAAM Day.
